As a young film director in Hollywood, Jack Boudreaux had worked on some of the most gruesome films ever committed to celluloid. During shooting for his last movie, Jack was scorned by the love of his life, horror film starlet Fifi LaRue. Not taking the rejection well, Jack swore revenge on Fifi and all her fans.

Researching how best to exact his vengeance, Jack came upon a site in Japan known for grisly paranormal occurrences taking place over the last several hundred years...the MWR Outdoor Recreation Center. Arriving at the spot of the former Menagerie of Oddities, Jack set his plan in motion. Surrounding himself with images of the most gruesome characters in the history of horror movies, he called on the spirit of his great, great, great grandmother; the late voodoo queen Madame Marie LaVeau. In the dim, candlelit gym Jack clacked his chicken bones, muttering in tongues over the familiar images of history's most infamous monsters and prepared to unleash the fury of 25 years of horror movie lore on Fifi and her followers. In a puff of smoke and a clap of thunder, the images came to life. One by one these demons of hell emerged out of the inanimate two-dimensional world of their film reels and stepped into the world of the living.

As the characters came to life, they turned to the closest outlet in order to satisfy their immense bloodlust...Jack Boudreaux. Unable to exert any control over his creations, Jack was quickly dispensed of, uttering the words "What have I done?" with his dying breath. Immediately, the characters made an attempt to escape the confines of the gym and enter the outside world only to find that their evil was limited to the borders of the site of so many past atrocities. Doomed to spend eternity in the abandoned gym, the characters can be heard sharpening their instruments of death, waiting for their next victim.

Witness the horror for yourself as MWR brings you "Director's Cut."

Don't end up on the cutting room floor!
